

About The Industry

Start Making Extra Money Making Your Own Candles & Soaps

The home fragrance industry has grown to a multi-billion dollar industry, and market analysis reports show that the home fragrance industry is going to grow even more. Candle makers are not only using paraffin wax to make candles, they are now also using gel wax, soy waxes, and other natural-based waxes. Candle companies are also complimenting their candle line with bath and body products, incense, reed diffusers, cleaning products, pet products, homemade cosmetics, and homemade natural soaps. Consumers are becoming more aware of the superior quality of handmade candles and soap products. Handmade candles are stronger than machine-made candles, and this quality alone is getting consumers to buy handmade candles as opposed to machine-made. Consumers are also realizing that handmade natural soap is superior to store-bought soap. Natural soap lasts longer, is gentler on your skin, and does not contain the additives that store-bought soap contains.

In addition to candles and soap, consumers are spending more and more money on products that SMELL GOOD. Consumers want their homes, cars, clothes, and especially themselves to Smell Good. Perfumists and scientists are working harder than ever to create unique products that support these desires and spending habits.

Homemade gifts are increasing in popularity. Instead of buying gifts for your friends and relatives, try making homemade scented products instead. Homemade gifts always mean more to the recipients than store bought products.
